The Rector's letter
Saturday 20 March 2021

Dear all

'When are we going to open the churches?' This is the question I've been asked most often as I've been out delivering reflections or Mothering Sunday flowers or simply going for a walk.

The second question I'm often asked is 'Can we have an online communion service again?' To answer the second question first, we will be having communion services both this Sunday (21st) and on Easter Sunday (4th April). Please prepare for these services by bringing bread and wine, or juice, as you join the livestreamed services.

Having now held all three PCC meetings, I can affirm that the plan is to open the churches for main Sunday services from 18th April, i.e. the Sunday after the next stage of the government's lockdown-easing roadmap begins.

This means that we will still be conducting virtual services up to Easter and the week after. This is a great sadness to me, as the joy of full churches singing their hearts out on Easter morning is one of the high points of my year. But this Easter, like last year, it is not to be, and so it is with great regret that we as a benefice felt it was right to remain closed during this period and then to open up gradually in the period after Easter.

The first stage will be to open for the main Sunday services. Barwick PCC has taken the opportunity of church closures to look at its service times and has resolved to hold services at the same time each week. So instead of alternating between 10am and 11am start times, from 18th April all services will begin at 10.30am. Holding physical services on Sundays only will continue until Trinity Sunday on 30th May, when there will be a joint benefice Service. My hope is that Trinity Sunday will be a chance for us to join together as a benefice and celebrate the start of full reopening. From June onwards we hope to return to a full service pattern of midweek as well as Sunday services.

Normally we would have a full set of services, reflections and activities during Holy Week. This, of course, cannot happen this year, but nevertheless we have a variety of opportunities for people to access either physically or online.

On each day of Holy Week there will be extended reflections, which will include spiritual music, and (on Monday–Wednesday and Good Friday) finish with Compline. These will appear online as usual at 6am, but you may wish to spend more time appreciating them in the evening rather than first thing in the morning.

On Good Friday there will also be a phone-in Stations of the Cross service, and on Easter Sunday there will be a communion service livestreamed from Barwick Church – with its newly installed phone-line enabling this to happen seamlessly (we hope!).

During Holy Week there will also be a Stations of the Cross installation in both Barwick and Thorner churchyards for people to access as they walk through the grounds. Please do avail yourself of this as an act of spiritual discipline during the most holy week of the year.

This past year has been both strange and difficult, but also creative. It has enabled us to stop and reflect in ways we have never done before, but as we approach the celebration of Easter, I pray that the light of Christ may shine in your life today and every day.

Blessings,
Andy

Easter Sunday

4th April

The church bells will be ringing to celebrate the Risen Christ, but there will not be a service in church.
